MIAMI, United States. - Cuban aviation authorities announced this Thursday on social networks the resumption of Aruba Airlines flights to Nicaragua and Guyana, two destinations of importance for Cuban citizens.

The airline will cover itineraries between Havana and Managua on Thursdays, December 16th, 23rd and 30th, and it will fly to Georgetown on Fridays, December 17th, 24th and 31st, and on Sundays December 19th and 26th.

This information was shared on the “Jose Martí” International Airport and ECASA Empresa Cubana de Aeropuertos y Servicios Aeroportuarios S.A.’s Facebook accounts.

As such, Aruba Airlines joins Venezuela's Conviasa Airlines as two of the airlines that will fly from Cuba to Nicaragua, a country that requires no visa for Cubans to visit.

Conviasa will reinstate operations to the Nicaraguan capital this coming December 15th.

Panamanian COPA Airlines will also cover this itinerary.
